Inside The Numbers

Fighting for the first time in nearly 13 months, the 39-year-old Wilder recorded his first win since October 2022 with a seventh-round TKO over Herndon (24-5, won last three), who was in survival mode throughout as he averaged just 12.6 punches per round, landed 18% overall, 16% jabs and 23% power and recorded only 15 total connects, 10 of which were jabs. Under the tutelage of Don House, Wilder was disciplined and worked behind a busy jab (46 attempts/4.0 connects per round) that comprised 68.1% of his total output. He also flashed his patented power as he scored knockdowns in rounds two (left hook) and six (flurry of rights) before a final right to the jaw in round seven caused Herndon to totter toward his corner, a sight that prompted referee Ray Corona to intervene. Though Wilder struggled with his own accuracy (13% overall, 9% jabs, 22% power), he was busy (67.6 punches per round) and ended the fight ahead 59-15 overall, 27-10 jabs, 3-2 body and 32-5 power.
