Inside The Numbers

In 8 of 12 rounds, Wilder and Chisora were separated by 4 or fewer landed punches — a fitting stat for a fun, sloppy battle between two forty-year-olds. Chisora directed 59% of his punches to the body, and actually landed 6 more power punches than Wilder, though Wilder connected on 47% of his power punch attempts and landed 19 power shots to Chisora's 15 over rounds nine and ten. Wilder dropped Chisora in the eighth and tenth rounds, lost a point in the eighth for pushing Chisora out of the ring, and was himself knocked down in the tenth — though it may have been a slip. Two judges scored it 115-111 and 115-113 for Wilder; one dissenter had it 115-112 for Chisora.
