Inside The Numbers

Through five rounds, the fight was an even, chest-to-chest slugfest — both men content to stand and trade power punches. Heading into the sixth, Bohachuk held narrow edges of 94-92 in power punch connects and 141-125 in total punches landed. Then Mosley Jr. changed everything. A jab to the body set up two right hooks to the head, and Bohachuk went down. He beat the count, but Mosley Jr. swarmed him immediately, unleashing a barrage of power shots that left the referee no choice but to wave it off at 2:38 of the round. When it was over, Mosley Jr. had connected on 46% of his power punches while holding Bohachuk to just 35%.
