Inside The Numbers

Daniel Dubois stopped Fabio Wardley in the second round, and the opening session told the story. Dubois landed 39 of 73 total punches for 53.4%, including 36 of 50 power shots, a staggering 72%, while Wardley connected on just 1 of 10. The gap never closed. By fight's end Dubois had landed 60 of 119 punches overall, 50.4%, against Wardley's 4 of 27, only 14.8%. The power numbers were even more lopsided, Dubois finishing 51 of 77 for 66.2% compared to Wardley's 2 of 18, 11.1%. Dubois worked mostly behind that power output rather than the jab, landing just 9 of 42 jabs for 21.4%, but he did not need it. Wardley managed only two body shots landed all night, and with his total offense cut off so completely, the stoppage reflected a fight that was decided in the opening three minutes.
