Inside The Numbers

Adeleye threw 97 more punches than Flores and landed 90 more. He scored the fight's lone knockdown with a jab halfway through the third round. A right bicep injury hampered Adeleye over the second half of the fight, as his power connects fell from 39 in rounds one through five to 30 in rounds six through 10 and he leaned on the jab, landing 40 to 26 over the first half. Flores failed to capitalize because he would not let his hands go. He threw 113 punches over the second half, barely more than the 106 he threw over the first, and Adeleye still outlanded him 70-30. All three judges scored every round for Adeleye, 100-89.
